A Rich History Provides A Promising Future

"A Century of Black Life, History and Culture" is the 2015 National African American History Month Theme according to the Association for the Study of African American Life and History (ASAALH), founders of National African American History Month. ASAALH was founded in 1915 and celebrates its centennial this year.

Viewing the collage that is on the AF.mil website, it's evident that the Air Force's African American heritage spans more than a century, even though the Air Force is not quite seven decades old.

Maj. Gen. Marcelite Harris is a woman of many "firsts"— among them the first female aircraft maintenance officer and one of the first two female air officers commanding at the U.S. Air Force Academy. When Harris retired in 1997, she was the highest ranking female officer in the Air Force and the nation's highest ranking African American woman in the Department of Defense.

The first African American general officer was Gen. Benjamin O. Davis Jr. (1912-2000), who served first in the Army and subsequently in the Air Force. His years of service (1936-70) include what some call the most significant decades of this country's military history. One of the original Tuskegee Airmen, in July 1942 he was named commander of the first all-black air unit, the 99th Pursuit Squadron.

Gen. Daniel James Jr. (1920-1978) was a 1942 graduate of Tuskegee University who trained pilots for the all-black 99th Pursuit Squadron, and did not see combat until the Korean War. He was the first African American to earn the rank of four-star general.

Willa Beatrice Brown (1906-1992) was the first minority woman to earn a commercial pilot's license, and in 1941 she became the federal coordinator of the Chicago unit of the Civil Air Patrol. Her efforts were directly responsible for the creation of the Tuskegee Airmen, training more than 200 students who went on to achieve that designation.

Dr. Guion "Guy" Bluford, Jr. is an engineer, NASA astronaut and the first African American in space (1983). Before becoming an astronaut, Bluford was an Air Force colonel and received both his master's degree and doctorate from the Air Force Institute of Technology at Wright-Patterson AFB, Dayton, Ohio.

The Air Force's African American history is rich with accomplishment, but it pales when compared with the Air Force's future.
