'Survey says' airmen compete during 'Family Feud' TV show

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — Five airmen here took center stage and were pressured to think on their feet as they competed against troops from other military services on the game show "Family Feud."

Teams competed against each other in a round-robin style format. The shows were taped during January in Los Angeles and are scheduled to air in May during Armed Forces Week.

"It's awesome and exciting to be able to compete and try to win some money," said Master Sgt. Jim Gantar from the 95th Mission Support Squadron. "It was a lot of fun."

Airman 1st Class Holly Frost of the 95th Aerospace Medicine Squadron said competing under pressure was a highlight.

"It was a rush to think fast, and it was a good experience," she said. "I think this is the first time I've had to think so fast on my feet like this."

According to Master Sgt. Paul Firman, Air Force entertainment liaison office superintendent, this is another way to showcase the Air Force during a time when 52 percent of adult Americans gain their perception of the military primarily from television and movies.

Sara Dansby, the show's contestant producer, said the military shows were successful.

"I think they're some of the best shows we've ever done. It had a very patriotic feel, and at this time in our lives, with all that's going on in the world, it's a great show to have," she said. "It's just our way of saying thanks to the men and women of the armed forces."

Other Air Force contestants included Capt. Robert Wagner of the Air Force Flight Test Center judge advocate general's office, Tech. Sgt. Daphne Soto of the 95th Air Base Wing's military equal opportunity office and Staff Sgt. Teddy Deshazier from Detachment 1 of the Air Force Special Operations Command.
